"At the top of the rock pillars are ancient monasteries, the Meteora monasteries. Some of them are more than 1,000 years old. Active holidaymakers have a great deal of experiences to choose from here. The height of the rocks is fascinating. There are numerous climbing tours available, which are led by skilled climbers and can be booked on location at every hotel. For summit chasers or hikers, a stunning panorama awaits at all times of the day and throughout the year"

"Back down in the valley, it's worth taking a trip to the village of Kalambaka. Here, at the foot of the rock cliffs, visitors are welcome to enter this church, that dates back almost 1,000. It is a Byzantine jewel"

German lifestyle magazine Laviva published a six-page travel feature on Western Greece, written by journalist Nele Marie Brüdgam, following a group media trip. She notes that the western coast is dotted with exceptionally charming towns and beaches where peace reigns supreme.

"Blue Lake beach is especially beautiful as is a crystal clear lake surrounded by cypresses... The next day we rented a canoe so that we could visit the lagoon. We wanted to indulge in this beautiful landscape one more time, before we had to say goodbye"

UNIQUE WESTERN GREECE – GERMAN GROUP TRIP

Visit generates more than 140 travel destination features

Following the group trip held in May, four participating journalists have already seen their travel destination features published, namely Klaus Eichmüller for Südwest Presse, Katrin Schütze-Lill for Hannoversche Allgemeine Zeitung, Nele Marie Brüdgam for Laviva and Angelika Pickardt for Travelbook. Features from two more participants are scheduled for publication.

Bernard Tschumi's modernist landmark caused controversy when it opened in 2007. A decade later, it's much admired for its reinforced glass floors, revealing ancient excavations underfoot, and transparent walls, creating a constant dialogue with the Acropolis. Free-standing exhibits, diffused with natural light, allow visitors to explore artifacts from every angle, and digital displays bring the antiquities vividly to life. Runner's World warms to fun, friendly atmosphere of race

ATHENS MARATHON: IN THE FOOTSTEPS OF PHEIDIPPIDES

RW Section Editor Rick Pearson heads over to Athens to report on the marathon, eat moussaka and run in the footsteps of legends.

At some point in every marathoner's life, they should head to the country where it all began: Greece. For it was here, in 490 BC, that the legendary Pheidippides immortalised the 26.2-mile distance.

Probably you've heard the story: following the Battle of Marathon, in which the Athenians defeated the Persians, the foot messenger Pheidippides was sent back to Athens to give word of their famous victory. He dutifully obliged, running 26.2 miles in the process and then promptly dropping down dead.

To complicate matters, there's another version of the story in which Pheidippides had to run from Athens to Sparta – a journey that's retraced on the 153-mile Spartathlon – but let's not get into all that. The marathon started in Greece, and that's where I headed in early November for the Athens Marathon. Granted, I wasn't actually running the full 26.2-mile distance (the 10K option proved just too tempting) but I would, at least, finish in the same place: the spectacular Panatheniac Stadium, which hosted the first modern Olympics in 1896.

"If any arena can inspire a sprint finish, it is surely the Stadium, Panatheniac the world's largest all-marble structure, which has been standing for almost 2.000 years."

In a full-page feature for the UK online edition of popular running magazine Runner's World, journalist Rick Pearson wrote about his experience of participating in the Athens Marathon 10K Road Race, emphasising the friendly atmosphere of the entire event. He noted the fact that the 10K race meant he had the energy and time to also explore the capital.

Travel Guide: The Island of Samos, Greece

October 30, 2017 / Arianna Trapan

Lying just off the Turkish coast, you can find Samos situated in the East Aegean sea, an island with so much history and beauty that will captivate you from the moment you descend. The island is the birthplace of Queen of the Greek Gods Hera, Greek philosopher and mathematician Pythagoras, the philosopher Epicurus, and the astronomer Aristarchus of Samos, the first known individual that suggested the Earth revolves around the sun. Not only is Samos rich in history but it is also known for its sweet local wine.

"Afterwards, head back to Pythagorios, a pretty town with side streets that are just so eloquently charming with typical Greek colours and the prettiest of doors"
